

Concessions available to Disabled People

Background. During the current economic climate, many disabled people are having to get by on less money, therefore it's important that we manage our money wisely and take advantage of the various discounts and concessions available to disabled people.

Why should disabled people get concessions? It's a fair question, and indeed, some disabled people don't want discounts and concessions but would prefer to pay full price and in return receive a full and equal service. However, the reality is that on trains, wheelchair users still occasionally have to travel in the goods carriage, theatres still have too few sign language interpreted performances and cinemas don't schedule sufficient numbers of audio described screenings. Moreover our benefits/income does not always meet the additional disability related costs that we incur.

National Disabled Persons Railcard. The card costs £20 per year or £54 for three years and allows card holders and one other adult to get a 1/3 off rail fares. The railcard also entitles you to other concessions including discounts on hotel bookings and food outlets within train stations.

Eligibility is open to people who are registered Deaf or Blind or are in receipt of certain benefits such as Disability Living Allowance.

National Concessionary Travel Pass. All eligible disabled people in England are entitled to free off-peak travel on local buses anywhere in England. If you qualify, you can travel for free on local buses anywhere in England between 9.30am and 11pm Monday to Friday, and all day at weekends and on public holidays. Also, if you have a travel pass and live within Greater Manchester, you can travel free on the Metrolink during off-peak times. Eligibility is open to people who are registered deaf or blind, have walking difficulties, or have been or would be refused a driving license for medical reasons.

Blue Badge. The Blue Badge Scheme provides a range of parking concessions for people with mobility difficulties, including free parking on meters. The badge enables holders to park close to where they need to go. The scheme operates throughout the UK and badge holders are exempt from tolls at certain river crossings, bridges and tunnels. Eligibility is open to people who are registered blind, or have walking difficulties, or are in receipt of certain benefits such as Disability Living Allowance.

Television License Discount. If you are registered blind or have a significant visual impairment, you can get a 50 per cent reduction on the cost of a TV license. You may also be entitled to a concessionary TV license if you live in residential care or sheltered housing. If you are blind you need to prove that you are registered blind or have a significant visual impairment. If you live in residential care, you may be entitled to an Accommodation for Residential Care (ARC) concessionary TV license, which costs £7.50 a year. If you live in residential care, your housing manager can tell you whether your accommodation is eligible for the ARC concessionary license.

Cinema Exhibitors' Association Card. This is a national card that can be used to verify that the disabled person is entitled to one free ticket for a person to accompany them to the cinema. Eligibility is open to people who are registered blind, or are in receipt of Disability Living Allowance. The card costs £5.50 and must be renewed annually. Application forms are available from most cinemas or by contacting The Card Network.
